

Variety KC Communication Board

Variety KC Invites Everyone To Play and Communicate With Each Other
Play is a critical part of children's development. When a child plays, they build many skills, such as language, social and emotional skills, and also their ability to problem solve.
Apart from spoken word, there are many ways to communicate, such as sounds, gestures, miming, pictures and hand signs.

Some children who have difficulty using spoken words may need another way to communicate during play, like a communication board.
Using a communication board helps children to understand what is being said to them, gives the children a way to communicate, and introduces the child to new words. Use these symbols to make choices, share ideas, and select actions for play. Just touch each picture to express what you want, feel or need.
